ABOUT BLAINE'S NOMINATION.

There are nineteen chances in twenty that Mr. Blaine will be nominated by the republicans next year for the presidency. There seems to be no escape from it. The great mass of the republicans are for him. There is something in the man, something in his defeat three years ago, and something in his quiet and discreet conduct since that time that makes him more popular than ever. It may be regarded as a foregone conclusion that his nomination will be simply a formality, for it will be done on the first ballot by a big majority, and with an enthusiasm which will fully match the remarkable scene witnessed in the national convention of 1884. So enthusiastic are many republicans in all parts of the country for Mr. Blaine's nomination that the saying comes with one accord that they would rather be beaten with Blaine than victorious with any other man that can be named.

Why the republicans should renominate Mr. Blaine is stated very plainly and wisely, too, by the Brooklyn Eagle, one of the most vigorous democratic papers in the east. Here are some quotations from the Eagle which are worth pondering by men of sober minds and fair judgment:

Mr. Blaine stands in a different attitude toward renomination than any other defeated man since Andrew Jackson, in 1824. "Old Hickory" was defeated that year by an unlooked for defection. It discolored the rules of re-election, and it threw its influence powerfully in the house of representatives for John Quincy Adams, the only man ever chosen president by that body, owing to a failure by the people to designate a clear majority of the electors. Mr. Blaine, on the other hand, was defeated in 1884 by a clear majority of the electors. He was not defeated in 1884 by a narrow margin, as was Jackson in 1824. He was defeated in 1884 by a clear majority of the electors. He was not defeated in 1884 by a narrow margin, as was Jackson in 1824. He was defeated in 1884 by a clear majority of the electors.

Then, this is another point made by the Eagle, which is substance is, that Mr. Blaine was nominated in 1884 fairly and honorably. He was the first candidate who owed his nomination to district representation. He was the popular choice of his party; the preference of three fourths of its voting strength in the Nation. Not a complaint was made against the regularity, popularity, and honesty of the methods employed to put him in nomination. Many of those in the republican party who opposed his nomination were members of the convention which did nominate him. Some of them left the convention and opposed him at the polls. Such republicans went off from the main body defeated Mr. Blaine. They said that his character was so bad as to break down all obligations of precedent in politics, and to justify members of the convention in resisting the conclusions of a body in whose deliberations they had taken part. The contention of Mr. Blaine's friends was that he was the desired party; which was unquestionable; that he would poll more votes than any republican nominee ever did, which was the case; that he had been twice before nearly nominated and had faithfully supported those who carried off the prize, which was true; and that personal charges against him by the magwumps were cruel, mean and false.

The great point to be considered in regard to Mr. Blaine's candidacy is the following as given by the Eagle:

Now, suppose the republicans should submit in 1888 to the four years' training of the magwumps and drop Blaine because the magwumps declare they will beat him again. How would that course compare with the method of the democratic renomination "Old Hickory" in 1824 and electing him, and in going to defeat in 1876 and 1880 with military glory for the sake of a principle and for courage against betrayal and cowardice? How many Blaine men would see to it that Mr. Blaine was dropped because he is a bad man, no other republican candidate prospered because the magwumps said he was a good man? The republicans will necessarily admit that the charges against Mr. Blaine are true unless they renominate him. Or they will admit that the man who polled more votes than any other republican before cannot be elected. This will stamp any other nomination than Mr. Blaine's by them with an infirmity of the charges against Mr. Blaine, with an admission of the hopelessness of the contest and with a confession of the paucity of the party collectively considered.

This is the logic of the situation, and there is no such thing as escaping it. If the republicans do not nominate Mr. Blaine it will be a confession that either Mr. Blaine is a weak candidate or that the republicans are cowards and are driven to the wall by the magwumps. But the republicans will nominate Mr. Blaine, and thus defend his honor, confirm their courage, and elect him.

SWINGING AROUND THE CIRCLE.

Owing to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce law, says the Milwaukee Sentinel, the railway companies have been unable to offer the president a free ride in his swing around the circle. The president will pay his way, except in the matter of the Pullman cars, and the New York Sun has been figuring up the cost. He has engaged a special train for the entire distance, consisting of an engine, a baggage and a supply car, and two saloon cars. This train will carry him for about 4,500 miles in stages divided as follows:

—A special meeting will be held at the Guards' armory to-night to arrange the final details for Friday night's entertainment. Besides the "Millennium's drill" there will be a choice literary and musical programme and at the close oysters will be served in all forms. It is claimed that the Millennium drill team is one of the best that Janesville has ever seen and the attendance Friday night is likely to be large.

—Our wideawake contemporary, the Milwaukee Journal, comes out in a new dress, that becomes it perfectly. It is not only "Geeks Like a Daisy" but it "Is a Daisy." The Journal is prospering and well it may. Its news service is one of the completest in the west, its columns are always bright and snappy, and L. W. Niemann, its editor, is a newspaper man from the ground up with a never satisfied ambition.

—Just look at that stack of empty whisky barrels" remarked W. B. Stoddard to-day as he called the attention of a reporter to a double deckered row of barrels piled up in front of Saml. Fathery's saloon. "They are all empty," and I have just bought the barrels for shipment," he continued. "They represent his trade for seven months. I tell you Sam will be a millionaire within three years if he keeps on at this rate." There were eighty-seven barrels in the stack.

—Henry B. Haskell ended J. L. Gately to-day to recover pay for putting a composition row on one of Mr. Gately's coat sheds. The amount claimed was sixteen dollars, and payment was refused because the coat shed was put on under the defendant's supervision and that the plan, although defective, was what the defendant ordered. This the defendant, of course, denies. J. W. Bates appears for Mr. Haskell and Horace McElroy for Mr. Gately.

—Credit is due the German woman and physicians for first using Red Clover blossoms as a medicine. Best results are obtained when combined with other medicinal roots and herbs, as to Dr. Jones Red Clover Tonic, which is the best known remedy for all blood diseases, stomach and liver troubles, pimples, constipation, bad breath, piles, and malaria diseases, indigestion, loss of appetite, low spirits, headache and all diseases of the kidneys. Price 50 cents of Penick & Evenson, opposite postoffice.

FREE DELIVERY.

Observe the New Regulations of the Local Office.

Free delivery will commence as soon after Oct. 1st, as the names of patrons of the office residing within free delivery districts can be enrolled.

Until further notice, delivery will be made once each day (Sundays excepted) to all persons residing within the three-quarter mile limit from the post office.

The business portion of the city will be served twice daily.

All post office boxes from 0 to 400 will be removed, to make room for further delivery service.

Parties requiring those boxes, will be furnished other boxes at the next quarter for all boxes for the next quarter become due October first.

All boxes upon which rent is not paid by the 10th day of October, will be regarded as surrendered, and the present holders will receive their mail by carrier, or at the General delivery window.

THE KUSHAN OVER.

Arch of the New Tobacco Row Out of the Way.

Last year's crop of Wisconsin tobacco is now mostly in the hands of the dealers. Buying is moderate, at from four to seven and a half cents.

Harvesting is all finished. The crop has been shedded in remarkably good condition, and much of it will command a high price. Its color is even, and its texture smooth and fine.

The inspection of Wisconsin tobacco for duty at the New York custom house is still unsatisfactorily conducted in spite of the recent rulings. Dealers boast that they can get any grade of tobacco in the market into New York for thirty-five cents a pound. The matter is to be considered at a meeting of the New England Tobacco association next Saturday.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

That of late the number of divorces in Rock county has increased alarmingly?

That a recent meeting of the sidewalk resulted in some very spicy personal remarks?

That two heavy damage suits came very near arising from the Milwaukee street pavement to-day?

That one half of the attorneys in town are talking about the "unprofessional conduct" of the other half?

That men can do more to injure a town by telling all their friends how poor business is than in any other way?

That men from other cities pronounce Janesville as lively a place, notwithstanding all her growling, as they have visited the year?

That the man who is always "moving" to get out of a bad neighborhood is really the one to whom the condition of the neighborhood is due?

That a man swallowed part of his false teeth while eating dinner in a Janesville hotel yesterday, and then kicked because the price of his teeth wasn't deducted from his bill?

You will notice how quickly a thoroughly successful article is imitated, and also that the imitations are without merit, as they are gotten up by the paltry parties and are full of imitations of the original.
